PROCESSIONAL

WELCOME and † INVOCATION (responsively) Edward Beddingfield, Pastor
Ad. fr. Prayers for Contemporary Worship,
The Church of Scotland, 1977

O Lord Jesus Christ,
 there was never sorrow like your sorrow on the night before you died.
 Your soul was sorrowful even to the point of death.
 Your sweat was as great drops of blood falling to the ground.

But our sins were the cause of your sorrow,
 and the burden of our guilt was the weight that you bore.

You are the beginning and the end of all things, the Eternal One,
 the visible expression of the invisible God.

For our sakes you became human, and in all things you were made like us, that you might have sympathy for us in our great need and little faith.

For us you tasted the bitterness of sin, and bore the weight of its burden, and gave yourself up to the worst of its power, even to the point of death.

Grant us, Lord, to hate evil, even our own, that we may feel with you in your sorrow;
 make us watchful, that we may kneel and pray with you in the hour of temptation, and not rise till the struggle is past and the choice resolved, to do what God desires;

And when we fail, as we will, give us faith to remember that you did not.
 In the name of the crucified Christ we pray, Amen.

Jesus, by thy wounded feet, / Direct our paths aright.
 Jesus, by thy nail-torn hands, / Move ours to deeds of love.
 Jesus, by thy spear-pierced side, / Remove our base desires.
 Jesus, by thy crown of thorns, / Annihilate our pride.
 Jesus, by thy silent tongue, / Shame our small complaints.
 Jesus, by thy sun-parched lips, / Curb our cruel speech.
 Jesus, by thy closing eyes, / Look on our sin no more.
 Jesus, by thy broken heart, / Knit our hearts to thee. Amen.
